Dear Mr. Breitenbach,

I strongly urge CALFED to adopt a plan that accomplishes the following aims:

- Maximizes water efficiency and conservation, and bases future water needs on realistic assumptions rather than inflated demands. In other words, assume cities, farms and industry are going to do a better job of water conservation in the near future than they have in the recent past.
- Removes barrier dams, increases instream flows, and acquires and restores habitat for fish and wildlife.
- Does not rely on proposed dam raises or new offstream storage reservoirs.
- Improves water quality by enforcing pollution limits.

Sincerely,

Clifford E. Anderson
